JULY 1, 2013-JUNE 30, 2014

FALL 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

UNDER MILK WOOD—A LIVE BBC RADIO WALES READING

Starring and directed by Michael Sheen, with Kate Burton and others

In October, the Unterberg Poetry Center celebrated Dylan Thomas' centenary by turning Kaufmann Concert Hall into a studio for a reprise reading of Under Milk Wood—on the very same stage where the "play for voices" premiered 61 years ago. We were proud and honored to offer the event free to the audience in our halls and around the world through live streams, broadcasts with BBC Radio Wales and WNYC, and on demand.

Dear Friends,

Whether you attend our events, participate in our classes, listen to our programs online or work out in our gym, you're part of the community that brings energy and life to this institution we cherish.

And one thing we never take for granted at 92Y is the community that makes us who we are.

Thank you for all you do to help 92Y achieve its ambitious mission: to be the model Jewish cultural and community center in the 21st century. Thank you for contributing your time, your talents and your dollars to make it all happen.

The first word carved in stone on our building is Rejoice—and it's hard to think of a single word that better describes the animating principle of 92Y. The joy of children in our classrooms. The joy of learning and discovery. The joy of health. The joy of Jewish life.

Without gratitude, there is no joy. In a spirit of gratitude, we put together the full annual report for FY 2014. These are just some of examples of what we accomplished—all made possible by your generous support.

Thank you.

ART THAT CHANGES LIVES IDEAS THAT CHANGE THE WORLD

Sarah Jessica Parker onstage

Cécile McLorin Salvant at Jazz in July

“The conversation about today’s culture that takes place at the 92nd Street Y is never one way. It’s a vibrant exchange that is as satisfying as it is urgently needed in our complex society.”

—Thomas L. Friedman

“I still remember my first 92nd Street Y reading—it was almost in black and white, like the poetry equivalent of a 1930s glamour film. At last, I thought, I am a grown-up. The Poetry Center is such a distinctive pleasure—such smart, involved audiences, such a fabled history and such a fabulous venue.”

—Margaret Atwood

Philip Roth

92nd Street Y inspires people to discover and explore the transformative power of the arts. We nurture musicians, artists, writers, dancers and performers at all stages of their careers. We present concerts and performances by the best from around the world, continuing our 140-year-old tradition of providing the creative space for innovation and artistic development.

But we’re so much more than a performance space. We believe everyone’s life can be enriched by exploring their own creativity. That’s why we bring high school students from underprivileged backgrounds to meet world-famous authors before they attend readings at the Unterberg Poetry Center. Why we offer an unrivaled array of classes in art, music and dance to people of all ages and all levels—and why we provide $1 million in scholarships so that no one is turned away for an inability to pay.

We passionately believe in the power of ideas to excite, enlighten and change lives. For 140 years we’ve been a destination for knowledge and intellectual discourse, a magnet for artists, influencers and pioneers on both sides of the podium, and on and off the stage. We’re invested in making our programs available to everyone, and now, through new simulcast initiatives and our award-winning On Demand website, we’re able to give free access to many of our programs to people all over the world.

WE'RE REIMAGINING COMMUNITY

You can be part of the 92Y community no matter where you are. Thanks to digital technology, our community extends from 92nd Street and Lexington Avenue all over the world. We want everyone to participate in whatever way is best for them—online or in person.

Every day we ask: How can we better serve our community, locally and around the world? Turn the page and see just some of the areas where we've been making really good progress ...

... WE INVEST IN OUR NYC COMMUNITY

By fostering knowledge and expertise, we leverage all our resources to create new programs and build on existing ones to make our neighborhood stronger, our community more enriched and New York City a better place to live.

HELPING YOUNG ENTREPRENEURS MAKE IT HERE

Through our Venture Fellows and Fashion Fellows mentoring programs, we're helping to grow start-ups into profitable businesses with employees and dependable revenue—developments which in turn benefit the whole city.

EMPOWERING LOCAL PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Through our Educational Outreach programs, 92Y is one of the largest providers of arts education in NYC's public schools.

TAPCo High School principal Ron Link worked with 92Y to create a 3D Digital Design program. His students expertly designed a multi-scene set for their school play—and Ron was so inspired by their work that he challenged them to create a 3D digital blueprint for a rooftop garden for their school in the Bronx. Ron's next goal is to acquire the resources to make the rooftop garden a reality.

"The 92Y Digital Design program is the first cornerstone of STEAM in our school. It's the kind of learning our students require to succeed when they graduate into an economy that's more challenging and competitive than ever before."

—TAPCo principal Ron Link

... AND OUR GLOBAL COMMUNITY

Giving back. Making the Jewish principle of tikkun olam (repairing the world) an integral part of everyday life—these are the values on which our 92Y community was founded. And through technology, we're creating a space for people to come and share their ideas no matter where they are. We're building community across the globe, transforming thinking about social change—and translating ideas into action.

#GIVINGTUESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 2013

In December 2012, following Black Friday and Cyber Monday, 92Y launched #GivingTuesday, a day to inspire people everywhere to give to something bigger than themselves. The movement caught on like wildfire—organizations in all 50 states and across the world partnered with us in a new spirit of civic engagement.

FORD FELLOWS

This year, this program brought 24 emerging leaders and visionaries from developing nations to the US to receive training in nonprofit management and leadership. We've created a global network of fellows who can exchange ideas and find solutions to issues in their own immediate neighborhood. For 14 years, Ford Fellows has been improving the quality of life for thousands of children, families and adults who live in many of the world's most underserved communities.

WE CHERISH JEWISH VALUES

Traditional or post-denominational, deeply engaged or taking a break—no matter how people define themselves, we'll help them find a way to connect to Jewish culture, heritage and wisdom in a way that works for them. At the core of everything we do are Jewish values like learning and self-improvement, the importance of family, the joy of life, and giving back to our diverse and growing community both locally and around the world.

We offer a vibrant mix of Jewish learning opportunities for adults and children, multigenerational holiday celebrations, and programs where leading thinkers, cultural figures, artists and politicians provide a huge range of perspectives on everything from current events to ancient Jewish wisdom.

92Y Connect Jewish After-School

Instead of teaching by rote, our after-school program sparks motivation and excitement for Judaism in our children. Our creative, individualized approach brings Jewish culture to life not only for the children in our program, but for their whole families, too—some of whom make their primary connection to their heritage through the program. What's next? A Connect Jewish After-School program for children with developmental disabilities is now in its pilot stage.

Innovation & Tradition

Through programs like Innovation & Tradition, run by Rabbi Dan Ain, millennials who have distanced themselves from organized worship are discovering how Judaism is relevant to young urban life. With Friday night dinners with guests like Colbert Nation's Father Jim Martin, Rabbi Ain is carving out a niche to teach Torah in today's world, without minimizing or detracting from the inherent power of the tradition.

92Y Israeliness™

Offering authentic Israeli cultural experiences in Hebrew—including after-school programs, Israeli Scouts-Tzofim, Israeli-style holiday celebrations, a summer camp all in Hebrew and even a book club—92Y Israeliness serves thousands of Israeli families living in the New York City area.

WE SHARE OUR VALUES

For 140 years, 92Y has said “we’re here” for any and every Jewish person searching for a place to call home on the holiest days of the year. This year, our services touched the lives of people all over the world. They came in person to our services on the Upper East Side and in Brooklyn. They also logged on to our free simulcasts on 92Y.org and, as a result of a new partnership, tuned into our broadcasts on Jewish Life Television (JLTV). In this way, thousands of people were able to celebrate the High Holidays like never before—with a congregation and a community.

Created by Covenant Award winner Karina Zilberman, Shababa brings everyone in the immediate and extended family together to experience the spirit of Judaism from the inside out. Our goal is to share Shababa with families far beyond our four walls. Now, with the Shababa Network in its pilot phase, we plan to train Jewish leaders in the Shababa philosophy and approach, prompting the creation of Shababa programming in JCCs, day schools and synagogues throughout the US and beyond.

WE NURTURE KIDS AND STRENGTHEN FAMILIES

Every day, we're here to provide vital resources for the entire community. We nurture children through every stage of development with classes, camps and programs that broaden their smiles, strengthen their bodies and keep them engaged and ready to take on the world. We bring families closer together. We foster the kind of community that inspires people of all generations to find purpose and live a rich, meaningful existence.

Helping families play, learn and grow together

Through enrichment classes for newborns to teens, summer camps, Jewish family programs, holiday celebrations and more, we bring families together to grow. At our annual Parenting Conference, nationally celebrated child development experts give parents the knowledge and insights they need to be better parents and build stronger families.

Developing teen leadership

Through volunteer programs, we give teens the opportunity to experience the joys of tikkun olam and of being part of something bigger than themselves, and to experience the transformative power of giving back.

Bringing all generations together

Our intergenerational programs aren't just for special times like the High Holiday services. We constantly enrich our whole community by bringing all ages together every day—like when our nursery schoolchildren make and serve chicken soup to our seniors and our seniors help our children prepare for holiday concerts—or how we're piloting a program in which high school students teach computer skills to seniors. Whenever and wherever we're able, we find ways to bring the generations together.
